TOPICS OF THE DAY.

Tun arrivals of live stock and fresh meat at Liverpool alone, from the United States and Canada, for the week ending March 10th, amounted to the following astonishing quantity: 753 cattle, 510 sheep, 8,938 quarters of beef, 2,275 carcases of mutten and 1,817 pigs. These were all taken across the Atlantic by steam—the live stock by three, and the dead by ten steamers. Of these, the Arizona carried the largest cargo, taking 2,529 quarters of beef and 849 carcases of mutton.

THE Chileans term of peace are so outrage. us that it is impossible for Peru to accept or at all events to carry them out. The Peruand forts, and the Chileans are carrying on such devastation and plunder of Pernyian and foreign property slike, that the ministers and admirals of France and England protested at first, and finally declared that they were ready to take possession of the Chilean fleet, and intercept Chilean supplies unless the military authorities would take some stops to protect the lives and property of neutrals, Limenans have been so plundered and requisiioned that ladies have had to take the jewels from their ears and their bracelets from their wrists to satisfy the claims of the conquerors. THE Ocernic in which H. M. King Kalakana crossed from San Francisco to Yokohama was built in Belfast in 1871 by Messrs, Harland & Wolff for the celebrated "White Star" 600 nominal horse power embracing every improvement available at that date. She has four masts, three of which are square-rigged, spreading an immense area of canvas. She is 420 feet long, and 40 feet 9 inches beam. She has three decks besides her harricane or promenade deck; two of these are completely of iron, thus the ship may be said to be one huge hollow beam of iron, and of immense strength. We had the good lack to take passage in her from New York to Liverpool some years back and found her almost marvellously complete in all sorts of fittings and conveniences. Electric bells were within reach throughout the magnificent saloon, and in every state-room. The table, attendants, etc., were everything that could be desired, and though the officers said that she was considered a "rather slow" ship, she kept up 13.5 knots per hour for six consecutive days. She is now running in the "Oriental and Occi-dental" line. Recently the White Star ship Britainic by the same builders ran from Queenstown to New York in six days and ten bank, the largest steamer that has been built, excepting the Great Eastern. The Servia is of 8,500 tons, but with a carrying capacity of 9,300. Messrs. J. & G. Thompson have built the vessel for the Cunard Company. Her extreme length is 530 feet, breadth 52 feet, depth 44 feet 9 inches. Cargo capacity 6,500 tons, with 1,800 tons of coal and 1,000 tons of water ballast. It will be seen by this that the Cunard Company are at last building ships with over ten breadths in their length. Twenty years ago the Cunarder Persia, then the finest vessel affoat, used to consume 6 7-10 pounds of coal per hour per horse-power. So great was the space required for the coal that though the vessel was of 2,000 tons burden, she could only find room for 250 tons of pay-ing cargo. Contrast this with the performances of the present day. The Arizona is double the size of the Persia, but she consumes only 124 pounds of coal per hour per horse-power. The consequence is that she can carry 3,400 tons of paying freight and can steam 1616 knots against the Persia's 13, thus burning but one-fifth of a ton of coal for each ton of goods carried across the Atlantic, instead of the 6 1-3 tons burned by the Persia. The present expenditure of coal is therefore less than one-thirtieth of what it was twenty years ago, and improvement is still going on. It is no wonder that sailing vessels find it harder and harder to make a decent living.

It is a strange fact that the older the world their history and customs. The modern student pursues his investigations under every possible disadvantage, but slowly and surely the mystery that has overspread the past is being dispelled by a host of ardent workers. The Egyptian hieroglyphics so long unintelligible have been deciphered, the engraved blocks of Babylonian and Chaldean origin have been translated, and the puzzling inscrip-tions on the Moabitic stone have been made to add their chapter to the history of the olden time. The art of writing, crude as it was in those days, and limited as was its knowledge, now affords us the only index to what would otherwise have been a scaled book. But of ancient nations not acquainted with the art of embalming language in undying characters, nothing definite can now be learned. Where the effspring of such races yet survive, their history lives in their songs and legends, from which alone a knowledge of their origin, language and customs may be obtained. It is a universal fault of students that while many are prone to grope in the past, others are as active in speculating on the future, while both neglect the opportuni-ties offered by the present—opportunities per-haps that will soon have passed away forever. Savage ruces, powerful only a few short years ago, have entirely disappeared from the earth with their legends and songs, leaving numerous blank pages in the chronicles of the human race that can never be filled. It is impossible to conjecture how many nations have thus passed away that do not even occupy a place in the memory of their exterminators. The lessons of the past should minators. The lessons of the past should teach the student of history, the archæologist, the philologist, the ethnologist, to "act, act, in the living present." We have just had the pleasure of reviewing the second volume of Mr. A. Fornander's "Polynesian Races" recently issued from the press of Trabner & Co. of London. Volume I of this work published in 1879 is an exhaustive study of the origin and history of the Polynesian races and their languages, and was the result of many years of historical and philological research among Indian, Malaysian and Polynesian lore. It embraces, besides the results of the original research of the author, all worthy of interest or credence that had been deduced by previous investigators. It is one of the most important works that has been contributed towards solving the mysterious origin and towards solving the mysterious origin and history of this large division of the human race, and as a book of reference for the student and investigator it is invaluable. The second volume is also the result of years of indefatigable and persistent labor, and is written in a style that will make it much more acceptable to the average reader than Vol. I. It treats mainly of the aboriginal history of the Hawatians and of the conquest of the group by Kamehameha, and while it is elaborate in its scope and at the same time concise, and compiled with the strictest regard for the facts, it is written in such a clear. This little apparates oils the cylinder constantly and perfectly. So little oil is used that a saving of oil and wear equal to four times its cost may be affected in one acasent.

Pint Size, $45. Half Pint Size, $30.

SMALL COTTAGE TO LET.

THE COTTAGE RESIDENCE OF W. P. Toler, on Beretasta Street, for rent furnishing at the cost of the facts, it is written in such a clear, comprehense and interesting style, that after the reader has read a few pages he will finish the book. It is a storchouse of knowledge and imparts its instruction in the most agreeable and fascinating manner. This work supplies most fully a want that has long been felt in its particular field, and will occupy a place on the shelves of future libraries along with Bancroft's "Native Races of the Pacific Coast." Mr. Formander has conferred a lasting obligation on the Hawaiian kingdom and every one interested in the history of the primitive inhabitants of theme beautiful islands, by collecting and compiling so much valuable information that otherwise must soon have been at to the intending perference and their friends, who have been at no small expense and trends work should have a place in every public and private collection of brooks in Hawaii net. It is cortain to be appreciated by those interinformation that otherwise must soon have been totally lost to the world, and a copy of his work should have a place in every public and private collection of books in Hawaii net. It is certain to be appreciated by those inter-ested in this particular line of research, and for such, profuse foot-notes and appendices have been added, that would have made the work too "dry" for the majority of readers if acorporated in the text. NOTES OF THE WEEK.
